

Singer Shocks Us All

One would never think to witness a crowd in so much shock, but tonight it really happened...

Forty-seven year old Susan Boyle, from Blackburn, West Lothian, shocked us all with her performance of 'I Dreamed A Dream' from the musical Les Miserables on Britain's Got Talent. Backstage, she said "I'm gonna make the audience rock," but did she really amaze us?

She walked on stage with a stange snigger, greeted by a demanding, harsh audience, and the renowned three judges: Simon Cowell, Amanda Holden and Piers Morgan. The audience jeered and laughed at her when she stated she wanted to be like Elaine Paige. A surge of energy invaded her body, and her confidence remained undiminished. She boldly took to the microphone, and her life changed forever.

Her soprano, sweet-sounding, beautiful voice astounded us all. The audience's faces transformed from a sea of expectancy to a cauldron of shock and elation. Supportive cheers and sheer disbelief enveloped the whole room. When she finished, everyone was on their feet, and she received a standing ovation from the judges. Susan Boyle joyfully indulged in a world of praise, surrounded by her new passionate fans.

Suddenly, she began to walk off the stage, before she had been given feedback: Everyone encouragingly called her back. One could sense that the audience regretted their disrespectful behaviour towards her, a person who could possibly become one of the greatest singers of all time. She stode back, with the crowd roaring with utter ecstasy. No-one would ever think that a person who was discouraged so much by an audience would produce such a mind-blowing performance.

Piers Morgan commented, "Without a doubt, this was the biggest surprise I have had in three years. That was stunning. An incredible performance. I am reeling from shock!"

Amarda enthusiastically stated, "It was a complete privilege listening to that." Mrs Holder was on the verge of being overcome with emotion. Miss Boyle rejoiced in the merriment people were experiencing due to her singing. Her heart overflowed with happiness; she was extremely proud that her confidence had not dripped at the beginning, in spite of the sneers of the crowd. The gobsmacked viewers would certainly remember this mesmerizing audition.

The observers' cheers followed Susan Boyle as she left the stage. She blew a grateful kiss to the audience, and loved every single second of it.

As she approached the hosts Ant and Dec, she felt overwhelmed with pride. The hosts fed her even more positive comments.

Meanwhile, the judges reflected on the audition. She had got through to the next round, and taught everyone a very important lesson: "Never judge a book by its cover."